

The Burj Khalifa pops up in Terrence Malickâ??s Voyage of Time film trailer

Description

Post by Larry Gleeson

By Chris Newbould

The UAE just canâ??t seem to stop popping up in movies lately, and the latest appearance finds the Burj Khalifa and surrounding Downtown Dubai popping up in the trailer for Terrence Malickâ??s epic, 40+ years (and counting) in the making Voyage of Time.

The film, somewhat bravely, seeks to chart the history of time from its beginning to its end, and features a 40-minute IMAX version narrated by Brad Pitt â?? himself no stranger to the UAE following last yearâ??s War Machine shoot â?? while a feature length 35mm version will reportedly be narrated by Cate Blanchett.

We donâ??t imagine the Burj will take quite such a starring role as it did in, say 2011â??s Mission Impossible: Ghost Protocol, after all with the entire, as yet unfinished, history of time to squeeze into 40 minutes thereâ??s likely to be quite a bit of competition for airtime, but the aerial shots we see in the trailer are pretty impressive, nonetheless.

The long-awaited movie will finally premiere at the Venice Film Festival in Septemeber, beginning its international roll out the following month.

(Source: http://www.thenational.ae)

Category

1. Venice International Film Festival

Tags

1. Brad Pitt
2. Burj Khalifa
3. Cate Blanchette
4. Cinema
5. Director
6. Downtown Dubai
7. Festival
8. Film
9. Filmmaking
10. Program
11. Terrence Malick
12. Tribute

13. Venice Film Festival
14. Voyage of Time
15. Writer

Date Created
August 23, 2016
Author
hollywoodglee