“STRAWS” exposes the negative impact the 500 million plastic straws we use per day have in our oceans.

Throughout the documentary, marine researchers, citizen activists and business owners discuss how it's possible to make a sea of change through use of sustainable alternatives to plastic, such as Aardvark paper straws.

NEWPORT BEACH, Calif. (April 13, 2017) – Recent reports show that 5 trillion plastic pieces weighing over 250,000 tons are floating at sea, up to 80 percent of plastic in oceans comes from land-based sources and an estimated 5-13 million tons of plastic enter oceans each year. To educate the nation about the growing plastic pollution crisis, director, producer Linda Booker created a new documentary that exposes the negative impact of the billions of plastic straws that live in our landfills and oceans.

“STRAWS,” narrated by American actor and screenwriter Tim Robbins, charts the history of straws and reveals our culture’s current obsession with single use conveniences. Throughout the documentary, marine researchers, citizen activists and business owners discuss how it's possible to make a sea of change through use of sustainable alternatives to plastic, such as Aardvark paper straws.

"Before diving into the research for this project, I didn't realize something as small as a plastic straw was such a significant litter and ocean pollution problem," said Booker. "My goal for this documentary is to make people think about how small habits can add up to huge impact. Removing plastic straws is a tangible, simple change people and businesses can do that can truly help make a difference."

"STRAWS" will be showcased at the 18th annual Newport Beach Film Festival on Saturday, April 22, at 11 a.m., in Triangle 1. The film is part of the "Short Slice of Life Documentaries" program. Booker and The Last Plastic Straw Founder Jackie Nunez, who is featured in the film, will be in attendance.

The graphic consists of two main parts. The top part features the dates 'APR 20-27' in a large, bold, black, hand-drawn font. Below this, there is a thick, black, horizontal brushstroke. Overlaid on this brushstroke is the slogan 'GO Deeper' in a white, hand-drawn font. The 'D' in 'Deeper' is notably larger and more stylized than the other letters.
