Los Angeles, CA – September 17, 2020 – The American Film Market announced today that RightsTrade, the film and TV industry’s online sales platform, has signed on as a Premier Sponsor of AFM 2020 Online. This year’s market will take place wholly online over five days, Monday, November 9 – Friday, November 13.

RightsTrade’s presence at AFM 2020 Online is designed to further expand its footprint and give back to the industry. The company will offer a complimentary trial subscription for the market’s sales and production company exhibitors providing them the opportunity to use the RightsTrade platform and its tools for AFM 2020 and through the end of the year.

The trial gives companies the ability to experience RightsTrade’s core set of functionality including integrated video conferencing with video asset streaming within calls, calendaring, messaging, and a self-serve content hub where each seller can list and manage their market titles including metadata, key art, video assets and more.

In addition, the main exhibit hub for sales companies on the AFM 2020 Online platform will be called the Industry Offices presented by RightsTrade. It will showcase the online booths for hundreds of sales, production and distribution companies, and international organizations.

Bill Lischak, recently appointed CEO of RightsTrade said, is one of the crown jewels of film markets and we couldn't be more pleased to support the industry at this year's event. In 2020, we've turned our focus towards expanding our online platform capabilities to serve an ever-growing need for online markets and to give back to those in the content business. We look forward to further expanding our reach and unique offering via the AFM."

Jonathan Wolf, AFM Managing Director said, "We look forward to connecting the world's sales companies with the RightsTrade platform as a valuable resource for further enhancing their sales and efforts."
