HOW TO WATCH THE 2021 SUNDANCE FILM FESTIVAL AWARDS: HOSTED LIVE BY PATTON OSWALT

See who the jury and audiences select to receive awards

Anyone can watch from anywhere in the world

There are so many good films that Iâ??ve seen at this yearâ??s 2021 Sundance Film Festival. The previous years I attended, including my first foray when I lodged in Salt Lake City, (I am terrified of icy road conditions!) and last year when I lodged in Park City at the Park City Hostel, I was fortunate to see any films. This year, however, I had a smorgasbord of films on my plate after formulating my coverage plan. I guestimated films I could incorporate. Other films, I garnered from the Sundance

Dailies with Festival Director, Tabitha Jackson.

I got a pre-festival taste with Night of Kings at the Hollywood Legion Drive-in screening in the days prior to the festival start.

HollywoodGlee at the

Hollywood Drive-in Cinema for the special screening of Philippe Lecoteâ??s Night of the Kings.

I received my VR goggles (my first) and sat in utter and complete fascination as I danced the night away last night after experiencing Baobab Studiosâ?? new immersive, Erick Oh-directed, animated film , Namoo â?? a shout out to Sam Doerge at New Frontier and Fumi Kitahara in making it a reality. I watched it twice!

Keep an eye on this multi-layered film.

So, as the festivalâ??s Award Ceremony is upon us tomorrow, Iâ??m sharing how we can all watch it together.
