Perspektive Deutsches Kino 2017: The Millennial Generation

Description

Posted by Larry Gleeson

Fourteen Films, including nine full-length fiction and documentary films, have been invited for the Perspektive Deutsches Kino in 2017.

Strong fiction films by millennials characterize this yearâ??s selection. The directors, who are mostly in their early 30s and were coming of age around the turn of the millennium, were shaped and socialized by this period. With them we take a look back into childhood and adolescence. We see kids affected by their parentsâ?? separation, and encounter endless parties and drugs. We accompany the protagonists on their search for personal freedom and stability.

Millennials by Jana Bürgelin

The fiction film Millennials (dir: Jana BÃ¼rgelin, prod: Filmakademie Baden-WÃ¼rttemberg) uniquely exemplifies this generation. It is a documentary-style big city tale that follows the two protagonists, Anne Zohra Berrached and Leonel Dietsche, on their â??Ã©ducation sentimentaleâ?• around Berlin. Leo is a photographer and would finally like some recognition for his photos. Anne is a successful film director and wants a child, but since she has no partner, she has, in wise foresight, frozen a few of her eggs.

In the fiction film Die Tochter (Dark Blue Girl, prod: Filmakademie Baden-WÃ¼rttemberg) director Mascha Schilinski approaches in an unusual way the problems children have after their parents split up. How must they redefine their positions and attitudes towards their separated parents when it comes to closeness and distance? Seven-year-old Luca (Helena Zengel) â?? in her desire to remain the only woman in her fatherâ??s life and, at the same time, the link between her parents â?? becomes a master manipulator.

Director Adrian Goiginger, who also studied at Filmakademie Baden-WÃ¼rttemberg, took a year off and during this time found production partners for his fiction film Die beste aller Welten (The Best Of All Worlds) in Lailaps Pictures in Munich and RitzlFilm in Austria. In a love story of a different kind, he re-examines his childhood by following seven-year-old Adrian (Jeremy Miliker) into the extremely exciting and adventurous world of his heroine-addicted mother.

In the film Zwischen den Jahren (End of the Season, prod: Radical Movies Production, Cologne) by Lars Henning, the world of Becker (Peter Kurth), the filmâ??s protagonist, is very limited. After having served fifteen years in jail, he just wants to lead a quiet life in self-imposed solitude. But then the man whose life he destroyed eighteen years earlier returns to haunt him. It is Lars Henningâ??s second full-length fiction film and again he has reversed the victim-offender constellation conventional for this genre.

For the first time ever the Perspektive Deutsches Kino will show a film from the Hochschule fÃ¼r bildende KÃ¼nste Hamburg (HFBK). The film Final Stage by Nicolaas Schmidt stands out for the filmic balancing act it conducts between documentary observation and subtle staging. Gabi, produced at the FilmuniversitÃ¤t Babelsberg Konrad Wolf, will open the Perspektive 2017 together with Back for Good (see post from December 21, 2016). According to director Michael Fetter Nathansky, it is a cinematic attempt to find expression for what has so often been said but has still been unable to change anything.

Christian von Brockhausen and Timo GroÃ?pietschâ??s KÃ¶nige der Welt (We were kings) about the music band â??PICTURESâ?• completes the programme. First known as â??Union Youthâ?•, the band came together at the turn of the millennium. With their mix of grunge and alternative they quickly became the German â??Nirvanaâ?•. The film revisits a drug-filled past and accompanies their new start.

On February 19, 2017 â?? Berlinale Publikumstag â?? the Perspektive will screen the winners of the Max OphÃ¼ls Prize 2017 for best fiction feature and the First Steps Award 2016 for best documentary ( Raving Iran, dir: Susanne Regina Meures).
