

My Life as a Courgette, The Salesman: Films to watch out for at 18th Jio MAMI Mumbai Film Festival 2016

Description

Posted by Larry Gleeson

By Mihir Fadnavis

If you are by any chance a film buff you'd be aware of your favourite time of the year – the 18th Jio MAMI Mumbai Film Festival. You'd also no doubt be really confused about what films to watch considering the sheer volume of amazing films put together by the lovely people of Jio MAMI.

Fret not. Listed below is a handy guide to make note of 15 films you should absolutely, under no circumstance, miss at the festival.

Under The Shadow

Director: Babak Anvari

Country: Iran

By far the most exciting film at the fest, Babak Anvari's film contains a mysterious spooky entity pestering a mother and her daughter during the fog end of the Iran-Iraq war in 1988. The film has been gathering some serious buzz ever since it premiered in Sundance back in January. It's also UIK's official entry to the Oscars — which bodes well for fans of intelligent horror cinema.

The Lure

Director: Agnieszka Smoczyńska

Country: Poland

Set in a Warsaw nightclub and full of weird lurid visuals, The Lure chronicles two mermaid sisters who arrive on land to explore the 'human' side of the world, and clash when they fall for the same human. Things get stranger when we discover the mermaids also have vampiric tendencies. The film created quite a buzz in Sundance where it won a Jury Prize.

YouTube Poster

Image not found or type unknown

Personal Shopper

Director: Oliver Assayas

Country: France

It seems like this year's MAMI has turned into the Fantastic Fest (what could possibly be better than that) because this is the third acclaimed horror film to watch out for. Oliver Assayas who totally bowled us over two years ago with The Clouds of Sils Maria is back with a spooky story with an undercurrent of social commentary.

Assayas' regular Kristen Stewart plays Maureen, an assistant to a fashion mogul in Paris who contacts a spirit of some sort. Festival darling Assayas picked up the Best Director award at Cannes earlier this year.

Old Stone

Director: Johnny Ma

Country: China

We know China can be a weird place, and debut director Johnny Ma explores yet another bizarre quirk of the country: if you help someone in a car accident and take him to the hospital, you are liable to pay their rehabilitation fees for the rest of their life. The protagonist of the film, a cab driver finds himself in such a scenario in a film that bagged Ma the award for the best debut film at the Toronto International Film Fest earlier this year.

Graduation

Director: Cristian Mungiu

Country: Romania

Graduation puts 4 Months 3 Weeks 2 Days director Mungiu back to his roots – in the underbelly of Cluj. The film follows a surgeon who for some reason is a target by unknown pranksters, and whose daughter is mugged and assaulted on her way to her exams.

With handheld cameras, bleak blue tones, and the exploration of grassroots corruption, Mungiu's latest has been heralded as a return to form for a filmmaker whose previous film Beyond the Hills was criticized for being too self indulgent. Mungiu bagged the Directors trophy at Cannes for this film.

YouTube Poster

Image not found or type unknown

Things To Come

Director: Mia Hansen Love

Country:France

Fast emerging as one of the most exciting filmmakers of this generation, Hansen Love's new film follows a 50 year old woman who needs to come to terms with dealing with life after a divorce. Hansen Love bagged the Silver Bear for Best Director in Berlin, but her amazing work in her previous film Eden is enough reason to be excited for this one.

My Life As A Courgette

Director: Claude Barras

Country: Switzerland

Celine Sciamma who earlier wrote the magnificent Girlhood teams up with director Barras for a stop motion animation about a 9-year-old boy who is put in an orphanage after his alcoholic mother dies — for which he may or may not be responsible.

Elle

Director: Paul Verhoeven

Country: France

The filmmaker behind some of the most nihilistic films of all time like Robocop, Total Recall and Starship Troopers returns after years with Elle, another nasty takedown of the society we live in. This time the story follows a rich video game honcho named Michelle (Isabelle Huppert) who is attacked by a masked man at her Parisian home.

Like all Verhoeven's previous films, Elle is supposed to present moral dilemmas with a satirical bite and a layer of icily dark commentary on sex, violence and, in this case, video games. It's France official entry to the Oscars.

Sand Storm

Director: Elite Zexer

Country: Israel

Winning the Grand Jury prize at Sundance, Elite Zexer's film which is set in Southern Israel follows a Bedouin woman dealing with everyday sexism and not so casual misogyny of the region after her husband is about to be married to a second, much younger woman. That should be an interesting watch because it's a topic that folks in India can unfortunately relate to all too well.

Hounds Of Love

Director: Ben Young

Country: Australia

In case you're looking for a serial killer movie, debut filmmaker Ben Young presents a highly intriguing one with Hounds of Love, which introduces us to a serial killer couple whose latest kidnapping victim realizes that the only way to escape is by getting the two psychos to turn against each other.

One other little aspect to convince you to see this film is that the many audience members at the Venice Film Festival walked out because they couldn't stomach what was happening on the screen.

YouTube Poster

Image not found or type unknown

The War Show

Director: Andreas Dalsgaard, Obaidah Zytoon

Country: Syria – Denmark

The War Show is supposed to be a blistering account of the Arab Spring seen through the eyes of radio host Obaidah Zytoon who began filming the state of things during and after the protests.

The Lovers And The Despot

Director: Rob Cannan and Ross Adam

Country: Britain

It's pretty obvious how demented and scary North Korea is, and it seems there's no dearth of bizarre stories to come out of the country. This documentary brings us the real life story of a filmmaker couple who was kidnapped by Kim Jong Il and were forced to make films in the country because the great dictator was a film buff.

Lantouri

Director: Reza Dormishian

Country: Iran

Yet another fascinating film from Iran, we're taken through three intertwining stories: one which follows a gang of thugs that attacks and kidnaps young children from families that gained their wealth through financial wrongdoings, another which chronicles a journalist who is not allowed to voice his opinion and the third which follows a prostitute who turns into a thug.

Clash

Director: Mohamed Diab

Country: Egypt

After garnering acclaim for his film Cairo 678, Egyptian filmmaker Mohamed Diab is back with another interesting story that puts various characters in a single location – a police riot car during the raging bloody streets of Cairo when the Muslim brotherhood president Morsi was overthrown and the country went nuts.

YouTube Poster

Image not found or type unknown

After The Storm

Director: Hirokazu Koreeda

Country: Japan

Like Father Like Son filmmaker Koreeda returns with another film with similar themes of isolation in the Japanese society. The film follows a writer struggling to live up to the success of his first novel and dealing with vices such as gambling and ego. While researching his next book he begins to spy on his ex wife who is now seeing another man. Reality hits him when he discovers that their son, in the custody of his mother is perfectly happy without him. The film has naturally received glowing reviews everywhere it's screened.

The Salesman

Director: Asghar Farhadi

Country: Iran

It's Farhadi's new film — that's all you need to know.

YouTube Poster

Image not found or type unknown

Other Notable Mentions:

Swiss Army Man: A delightful tale of a suicidal man whose life is saved by a farting corpse.

The Wailing: Yet another engrossing watch from Korean maestro Hong Jin Na about a Korean village going through a turmoil after a Japanese man encroaches their territory.

Neruda: The new film from Pablo Larrain which has been garnering some terrific buzz.

Madly: A short anthology featuring directorial works from Anurag Kashyap, Gael Garcia Bernal, Mia Wasikowska, Natasha Khan, Sion Sono and Sebastian Silva.

Death in Sarajevo: Danis Tanovic's new film.

I, Daniel Blake: Festival darling Ken Loach's latest which is sure to have insanely long lines – make sure you get to the screening hall early.

(Source: <http://www.firstpost.com>)

Category

1. Mumbai Film Festival
2. Spotlight Screening
3. Toronto International Film Festival
4. Venice International Film Festival

Tags

1. 18th Jio MAMI Mumbai Film Festival 2016
2. Agnieszka Smoczynska
3. Andreas Dalsgaard
4. Asghar Farhadi
5. babak anvari
6. Ben Young
7. Claude Barras
8. Cristian Mungiu
9. directors
10. Elite Zexer
11. Film
12. Film Festival
13. Filmmaking
14. Hirokazu Koreeda
15. I, Daniel Blake
16. Johnny Ma
17. Mia Hansen Love
18. Mohamed Diab
19. Obaidah Zytoon
20. Oliver Assayas
21. Paul Verhoeven
22. Reza Dormishian
23. Rob Cannan
24. Ross Adam

Date Created

October 16, 2016

Author

hollywoodglee