Berlinale Goes Kiez

Description

Posted by Larry Gleeson

Since 2010, the Berlinaleâ??s Flying Red Carpet has traveled from arthouse cinema to arthouse cinema on seven evenings during the festival, visiting Berlinâ??s movie lovers in their neighborhood cinemas. On each of these evenings, one Berlin arthouse cinema turns into an additional festival venue and presents two selected films from the Berlinale program.

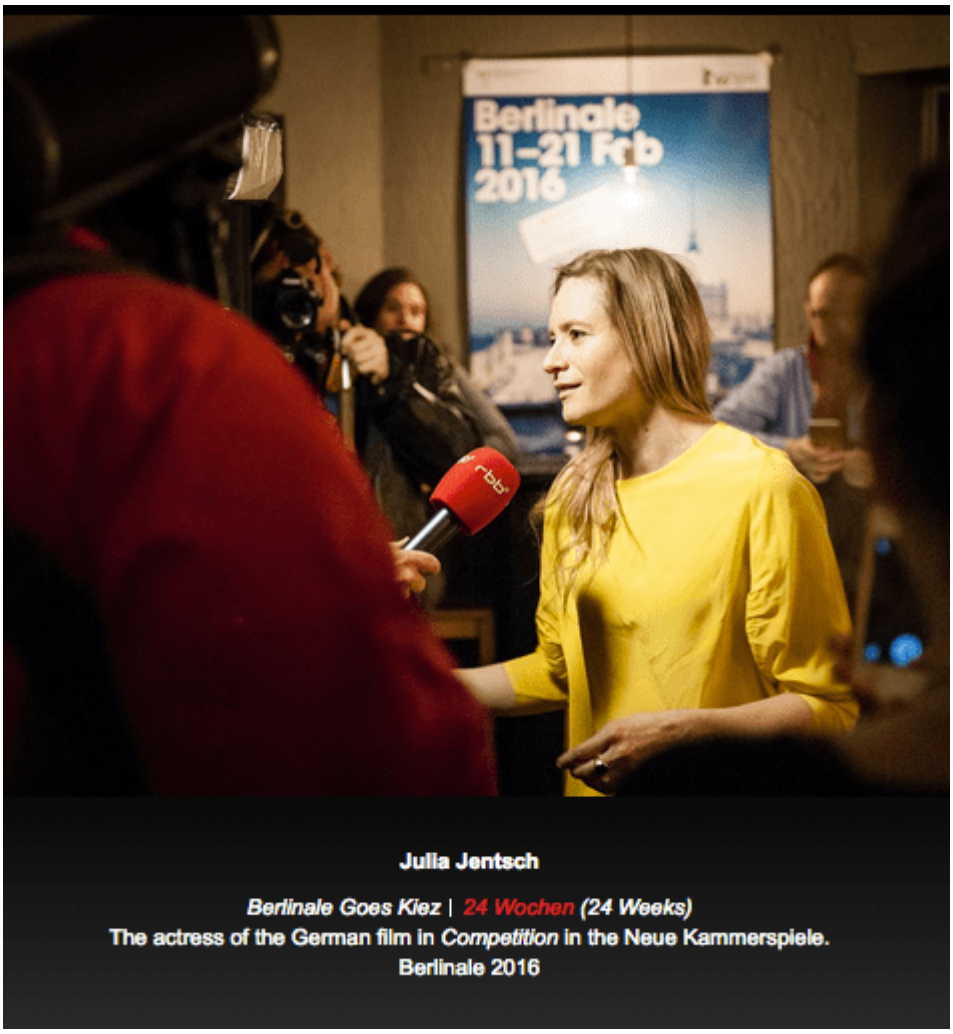
Just like they do at the regular festival, the film teams usually introduce their works in person at the neighborhood cinemas and are available to answer questions and discuss their films with audiences after the screening. Besides the film team, a patron of the cinema will also welcome audiences to the small Red Carpet: one prominent film personality acts as the patron of each neighborhood cinema, thereby supporting the cultural work of his or her favorite theatre.



Please enjoy highlights from last yearâ??s Berlinale Goes Kiez in the following video from the Berlinale â?? Berlin International Film Festival:

Neighborhood Cinemas 2017:
Bundesplatz-Kino (Wilmersdorf)
City Kino Wedding im Centre FranÃ§ais de Berlin (Wedding)
Eiszeit Kino (Kreuzberg)
